2.5.1 - Mechanism of internal assessment is transparent and robust in terms of frequency and mode. Write description within 200 words.

The mechanism of internal assessment is designed to be transparent, robust, and student-centered, ensuring fairness and consistency in evaluating academic performance. Assessments are conducted at regular intervals, adhering to a pre-defined academic calendar shared with students at the beginning of the term.

The frequency of assessments includes periodic tests, assignments, quizzes, presentations, and project evaluations, spread evenly throughout the semester to monitor and enhance learning outcomes. Students are informed about the weightage and criteria for each assessment component well in advance, ensuring clarity and preparedness.

The modes of assessment are diverse to cater to different learning styles and objectives. Written examinations test theoretical understanding, while assignments and projects assess research and application skills. Presentations and viva-voce are used to evaluate communication and analytical abilities.

Transparency is maintained by sharing detailed rubrics and evaluation criteria with students before assessments. After grading, feedback sessions are conducted to discuss performance, strengths, and areas for improvement. Answer scripts and evaluation sheets are made available for review, and students are encouraged to seek clarifications if needed.

Regular parent-teacher meetings and academic reviews further reinforce the accountability and inclusiveness of the internal assessment process, making it a fair and effective tool for continuous learning and improvement.
